Level 46: Taxidermy Collection

Level 46 is a series of rooms and spaces that present themselves with an extensive collection of stuffed or preserved animals. The floor is grey, scratchy carpet arranged in a linear pattern, on top of which the majority of specimens are placed. The walls are a typical white drywall or lightly coloured wood, and many heads of animals or similar body parts, such as horns, tusks, or antlers, are frequently mounted upon the walls. The ceiling is a grid of metal support beams with fluorescent lights hanging from them. The most distinguishing feature of this level, as aforementioned, is its existence as a collection of preserved organisms. Many different specimens such as wolves, bears, deer, or boar, are stuffed and mounted atop a small diorama of natural terrain. More exotic animals such as alligators or smaller ones such as snakes have been spotted also. Some of the more prized specimens are placed in sealed landscape features typical for the environment in which an animal could be found naturally.

These exhibits can be accessed by a door connecting to back-hallways of the facility. Entities are the main hazard in this level, and can be seen wandering around amongst the displays at occasional intervals. One should hide amongst or even disguise themselves as one of the specimens if an entity is nearby, although this could be a risky tactic. The horns or teeth of animals that are sometimes on display could be used as weapons in an emergency.
